

Founded in 1999, The Human Rights Education Center of Utah is a nonprofit 501©3 organization that promotes equality through advocacy, education and civil dialogue.

www.hrecutah.org

In keeping with the mission of The Interfaith Roundtable to increase offering the following harmony and understanding in Utah communities, The Human Rights Education Center of Utah is offering the facilitated discussion during Interfaith Month 2012:

Bridging Religious Divides with Civility and Respect/A Discussion

Your voice will be heard as you join with others who want to help bridge the religious divides in our community. We will identify challenges and solutions with a living network of collaborative dialogue around the questions that really matter. What creates the religious divides in our communities and how can we personally help to bridge them? Connecting experiences with insights and ideas will build practical ideas to help us build more respectful and inclusive religious communities. This is a highly interactive workshop! This workshop advocates for people of all faiths to live and work in harmony together by learning more about one another. Older teens and young adults are encouraged to attend.

Facilitators:

Carla Kelley, Director of The Human Rights Education Center of Utah
Mary Barth, Board President of The Human Rights Education Center of Utah

The time: 9:00 AM- 12:30 PM
The location: 231 East 400 South #345
The date: Saturday, February 18th
Free parking behind the building

RSVP to: carla@hrecutah.org

Prejudice is born in ignorance. Acceptance is born in education.